15. Terms of Service.

The Artist's and Inventor's Legal Clinic is a nonprofit association of attorneys, not a law firm. We provide pro bono legal consultation, at our discretion, to all who apply; and pro bono legal assistance or representation to those who can demonstrate financial need. If you qualify for pro bono assistance, any attorney who volunteers to help you will not charge you legal fees; you will, however, be responsible for any out-of-pocket expenses such as registration fees and all court costs and filing fees. If you do not qualify for pro bono legal service, we cannot assign or require any attorney to represent you; however, we can help you find an attorney who specializes in the type of legal service which you seek. Finding an attorney who will take your case pro bono may not be possible, especially for litigation, or may take an extended period of time; however, we are in contact with many attorneys who are willing to reduce their rates in order to assist those in the arts.

Once we review your application we will either email or call you to arrange an appointment for your consultation. In some cases we will have enough information from your application to make a referral without a making an appointment for a Monday afternoon.

If we refer you to an attorney, it will be your obligation to contact the attorney and establish a professional attorney-client relationship. The Artist's and Inventor's Legal Clinic will not be a part of the relationship. An attorney that accepts your matter agrees to handle only the particular matter that you discuss with us for so long as they choose, free from any obligation to you and entirely at their will. He or she does not become your "general counsel" to handle other matters. If a new matter arises you may discuss further work with your attorney, which you should put into writing, or return to the Artist's and Inventor's Legal Clinic and open a new application.

In the event that new information arises that changes your situation in any way, please inform the Artist's and Inventor's legal Clinic promptly. Please also inform us of any change of address, email, or phone. Note that if we request additional information, your file will be placed on hold until such time as the information is received.

16. Client Declaration.
